1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Introduction

- 1.1.1 Non-Governmental Organizations [NGOs] are increasingly being recognized by government as potent forces for social and economic development; important partners in nation building and national development; valuable forces in promoting the qualitative and quantitative development of democracy and not least, important contributors to GNP. The Government of Tanzania recognizes the need to work together with NGOs and the need for such cooperation to extend to other key players, including funders, disadvantaged people themselves, other sectors of civil society and the wider public. NGOs has themselves been re-examining and evaluating their work, re-defining their roles, whom they serve and are accountable to, and endeavouring to function more effectively and efficiently.
- 1.1.2 The Government and other stakeholders recognize the fact that at this point of our development process, NGOs are partners in development and that an enabling environment be put in place for them to operate and thrive.
- 1.1.3 Initial consultations noted that an NGO Policy which will guide the operations of NGOs in Tanzania need to come from both the Government and the NGOs. Many laws governing the registration and operations of NGOs were a course of confusion and that collaboration between the Government and NGOs was inadequate, internal coordination and self regulation within the NGOs themselves need to be improved.
- 1.1.4 The consultation recognized the need for a new policy and legislative framework, which would help to address many of the problems that are currently experienced by NGOs.

2.0 CURRENT STATUS OF NGOs

2.1 Growth and role of NGOs

- 2.1.1 Currently there are about 3000 local and international NGOs in Tanzania. Some of these deal with gender, human rights, environment, advocacy, participatory development etc. All of them have been assisting in strengthening the civil society through informing and educating the public on various issues, for example, their legal rights or entitlements to services or by helping attune to Government Policies.
- 2.1.2. The activities of NGOs have increased since 1985 when major political, social and economic reforms were introduced. However due to various factors such as lack of information on who should register, inadequate information of what is an NGO and to some extent cumbersome process of registration, there are Organization which are not registered, but which quality to be identified as NGOs. There exist Umbrella Organizations, which have been formed in response to the need for NGOs coordination networking and information exchange, etc.

These factors call for a comprehensive policy, which will not only solve the immediate problems of NGOs, but assist in the promotion and development of the NGOs in Tanzania. However, this policy reiterates and retains all the fundamental principals of NGOs, that, is they are form, run developed or terminated only through free and voluntary acts of individual and association; are managed and controlled by members, trustees or directors independent of the Government but within the framework of liberties and constraints provided for in the laws.

Governments and International agencies are giving increased recognition to NGOs particularly in enhancing people-centred development. Implementation of the above policy statements will promote efficiency and accountability of the NGOs and make a maximum contribution to the country development process. Likewise, by creating an efficient institutional framework, this policy should help streamline and simplify the procedures for registration of NGOs.

As noted in the definition of NGOs, operations of NGOs enhance the development of a democratic society since they are formed by independent, voluntary associations and contribute to the society through their care and welfare, gender equality, human rights and development activities. It is also clear that the roles played by NGOs and expectations placed upon them are increasing. At the same time, NGOs' missions, objectives, activities, structures and relationships are diversified. Therefore, the implementation of this Policy that retains the positive virtues of the existing NGOs practices will enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of NGOs in the country's development process.

The NGO sector in Tanzania is just emerging and is made up of largely small NGOs. Concerted efforts in the implementation of this Policy will ensure that the numerous small NGOs which are the majority are strengthened.
